NLACRC understands that you may have privacy concerns when participating in virtual meetings, and we therefore ask you to follow the guidelines below when attending the Zoom NLACRC new consumer orientation:

- Do not record or duplicate the audio or video from the orientation.
- If you have specific questions (such as those that may require you to share confidential or sensitive information), please do not ask these questions during the orientation. Instead, the orientation host will provide you with the person you should contact after the meeting with your question.
- Mute your microphone during the orientation except when you are speaking to the host or group (such as asking a question). If you are attending the orientation by computer or Zoom app, click the “Mute” button on the bottom left of your Zoom participant screen. If you are dialing in through your phone, you can use your telephone’s “mute” button.
- For those attending the orientation via computer or Zoom app:
 - You may consider turning off your Zoom video by clicking the “Stop Video” button on the bottom left of your Zoom participant screen. If you are dialing in through the Zoom phone number, you will not appear by video and you do not need to take any action to remove a participant video.

- You may also consider changing your Zoom display name after you enter the orientation (this is the name that appears in your participant video window). You can do this by selecting the “Participants” button at the bottom of the Zoom window when you are in the meeting, selecting your name in the “Participants” list, and then selecting “Rename.” Please keep your display name appropriate for the other participants, such as by using just your initials. If you are dialing in through the Zoom phone number, only your telephone number will appear.

We look forward to sharing information about NLACRC with you at the upcoming orientation.
